How AM Service collects personal data

Some of the personal data collected by AM Service is directly provided by you, e.g. in conjunction with entering into the customer agreement. AM Service also obtains some information by registering how you use the cloud service, e.g. in that AM Service stores log entries when you use the cloud service, which includes your IP address, information regarding your web browser and its settings and the date and time when you use the cloud service. AM Service also collects information by using technology such as cookies. For more information regarding how AM Service uses cookies, please refer to the Cookies Policy. In addition, AM Service collects information regarding the device you are using when you use our services, which operating system you are using, your IP address, and information which can identify your device and data about when your device crashes. This data may be shared with the third party vendor 'sentry.io'. This data is only shared when tracking device crashes in the purpose of improving the product.

Sharing personal data

Unless required by law, or is previously stated, AM Service does not disclose your personal data to any third party

AM Service reserves the right to share your personal data in the following cases:

- In conjunction with changes to our business structure, e.g. bankruptcies, mergers, acquisitions, liquidations, reorganisations or sales (in whole or in part), personal data may be shared with others.
- Where required by law, ordinance or decision of a governmental authority or in order to defend AM Service against legal claims.
- In order to protect AM Service's rights, the company's property and the company's security or third-party rights, property or security. Personal data may also be shared to sustain agreements and policies, or for the purpose of evaluating or preventing fraud.

AM Service reserves the right to disclose or use collective or de-identified information, irrespective of the purpose therefor. E.g., AM Service may share de-identified information with the company's partners – in business contexts or for the purposes of surveys. For example, this may involve explaining to a potential customer how many notices a company using AM Service sends per day, or that AM Service cooperates with research companies or researchers in order to examine interesting questions regarding communications at the workplace.

How you can manage the collection/use of personal data

You have the possibility to manage cookies and other types of local data storage through your web browser. You also have the possibility to change your settings on your mobile telephone regarding data collection and sharing, e.g. location services and other data. AM Service cannot control these choices or influence the basic settings since they are offered via mobile operators or web browsers.

Where AM Service processes your personal data

AM Service processes your personal data within the EU/EEA since AM Service's servers are located within the Area. This means that your personal data will not be transferred to third countries.

Storage time

AM Service only saves your personal data as long as necessary for the purpose of the respective personal data process or as long as necessary according to law.

How AM Service processes your personal data in a secure way

AM Service approaches security with the utmost seriousness. AM Service uses several methods to protect the information you provide to the company. AM Service strives to ensure that your information will not disappear, be unlawfully used, end up on the wrong hands and is not exposed. The methods used to secure your information take into account modern technology as well as how integrity-sensitive the information is which AM Service collects, manages and stores. If you wish to know more about AM Service's policy regarding security and confidentiality for your personal data, we encourage you to read our Data and Security Policy.

Your rights

You have the following rights in accordance with applicable data protection legislation:

- The right to access. You can request a copy of the personal data which AM Service has collected and stored about you in its capacity as personal data controller. You may request a copy at no charge.
- The right to rectification. You are entitled to have incorrect information rectified by AM Service or to supplement incomplete information.
- The right to erasure. You are entitled to have your personal data erased provided the information is no longer necessary for the purposes of processing, if you object to direct marketing, if the personal data has been processed in an unlawful matter, or where the personal data must be erased in order to fulfil a legal obligation covering AM Service.

- Right to restrict processing. You are entitled to request that AM Service's processing of your personal data be limited.
- The right to object. You are entitled to object to the use of your personal data for the purposes of direct marketing or in those cases in which AM Service process your data based on a legitimate interest.
- Right to data portability. You are entitled to request that your personal data processed by AM Service about you as a consequence of fulfilling the customer agreement is transferred to another personal data controller.

Filing complaints with the Swedish Data Protection Authority

The Swedish Data Protection Authority (Sw: Datainspektionen) is responsible for monitoring the application of the data privacy legislation and, if you believe that AM Service is processing your personal data in an improper way, you have the possibility to file a complaint with the Swedish Data Protection Authority.

The service is not available to children

AM Service's cloud service is not directed to children under the age of 13. Contact AM Service if you discover that a child under 13 has provided personal data without the approval of their guardian.

Section II –data processor

Processing personal data in the capacity of data processor

AM Service processes the following personal data on behalf of the customer in its capacity as data processor.

- Name, username, mobile telephone number and e-mail address of users in conjunction with the creation of a user account. Such users have obtained access to the cloud service through the customer.
- Personal data provided by AM Service's customer or you as a user through use of the cloud service.

When AM Service processes personal data on behalf of our customers, we do so in accordance with the instructions received by AM Service from the customer and which are set forth in the data processing agreement entered into between AM Service and the customer.

For questions or in order to exercise your rights with respect to personal data processed by AM Service in its capacity as data processor, you should contact the legal person who entered into the customer agreement with AM Service, i.e. the legal person who gave you access to the services.

The customer has control of, and many choices associated with, this personal data. For example, the customer may grant someone access to, or remove someone's access to, the cloud service by changing the user's settings, managing rights, exporting data, creating new users on the account, sharing worksite public workorders. Since these choices and instructions may result in access to, or use of, the software or the disclosure, modification or removal of data, the customer may contact AM Service support for more information regarding choices and instructions in the service.

Changes to the Privacy Policy

AM Service may make changes to this policy. In conjunction with changes, AM Service will provide information regarding the changes on this page. In the event you choose to continue to use the service after the changes have entered into force, you thereby approve the updated policy.
